1) "Lancashire Inquests, Extents, & Feudal Aids, Pt. 3" (google ebook)

p. 47: "Ughtred, son of Huck, was master serjeant of Amounderness, & father of Richard de Singleton. Alan de Singleton, son of this Richard, succeeded to the carucate in Steyna after his father's death in 1211 (Pipe Rolls, p.238), when he confirmed to Cockersand Abbey the grant of William son of Swain, & Matilda, his wife, daughter of Ughtred, son of Huck, of one bovate of land there (Chartulary, p. 136). This carucate afterwards passed to the family of Banastre, by marriage with the heiress of Singleton.
p.52: Mortain was bestowed upon Ughtred, son of Huck (Pipe Rolls, p.430). Richard de Singleton, son of the said Ughtred, had been dispossessedlater restored to Alan son of the said Richard de Singleton.

Ughtred (or Uctred), is mentioned in records during the time of King Henry II (1154-1189 AD). He was usually referred to as "Uctred do singleton" which means "Uctured of Singleton". He inherited the estate from his father as proven by two entries in the Lancashire Pipe Rolls. Other records are in the Lancaster Chartulary 11S3-1160.

Richard de Singleton, who inherited his father Ughtred's estate, died in 1211 and the estate in Singleton passed to his son Alan de Singleton. Alan married Alice, daughter of William de Winwick.
